CLIMATE JUSTICE NOW

MAKE POLLUTERS PAY

The poorest and least responsible communities face the severest impacts of the climate crisis. This is unjust.

Polluters, including in the UK, must pay for the damage they are causing.

Last year at COP27 world governments agreed to create an international Loss and Damage Fund to compensate for the severe impacts of climate change on communities, their health, livelihoods, culture and security.

Other countries have made pledges but the UK Government has yet to commit any funding to this.

We are here today to ask our local MP to ask questions in Parliament about the Loss and Damage Fund and to write to the Prime Minister to ask that the Government commits to making UK-based fossil fuel companies and other big polluters pay to finance the Fund.

How you can help: please also write to your MP about Loss and Damage and ask them to make sure that the UK honours its commitments and contributes to the fund. You can find a link to a template letter to MPs here.
